

TAKEN FOR RIDE BY AN ARMED BANDIT

Tinley Garage Man Has Movie Thriller Night Ride Experience

Henry Hase, Tinley Park garage man was the victim of a mysterious holdup last Wednesday night and was forced to ride with a gunman at a speed of 84 miles an hour. He was driving south on Harlem avenue about eight o'clock that evening. Upon arriving at the junction of Harlem Ave., and the Lincoln highway he stopped the car for oncoming traffic on the Lincoln Highway. Just as he was starting the car, an armed gangster jumped on the running board, yanked the car door on the driver's side open and poked a gun in Hase's side and said "Drive me where I want to go." The man appeared to be between 35 and 40 years old, had black hair and was about 175 pounds in weight. He was unmasked. The car was driven thru Frankfort on route 45 and thence south. When the roadhouse near the Peotone road was reached the gunman ordered Mr. Hase to stop. He then took the wheel and sped toward Kankakee at 84 miles an hour. Upon reaching that city, he stopped for stop and go signs and continued south. About ten miles out of Kankakee he turned the car about and headed north again. He drove thru Kankakee and took the road by the fairgrounds. During all his driving he kept Mr. Hase covered.

While between Kankakee and Manteno, another car going north, suddenly loomed up. The gunman was going at a high speed when Mr. Hase saw the other car and yelled "Look out." The gunman tried to swerve over to miss the car ahead, but the hind end of the car swung and struck the other car a glancing blow, which ditched both cars. Mr. Hase was thrown against the windshield by the terrific impact and was momentarily stunned. When he regained consciousness, he discovered the gunman had disappeared. He heard a moan coming from the car which had been struck and upon opening the car door found an elderly couple in the car quite badly injured. Stopping a passing car, Mr. Hase told the driver what had occurred and asked him to notify the state highway police which he did and in a brief time the officers arrived. The injured couple were removed to a hospital.

Mr. Hase told the officers of his experience and that even though he had offered the bandit all the money he had with him and also the car if he would let him go, the bandit refused. The officers searched the highway from Manteno to Peotone but could find no trace of the bandit. It is thought the gunman was a member of a gang of robbers who have of late been stealing safes and stores in Joliet and Chicago Heights and was trying to meet the rest of his gang to pull a job.

Mr. Hase finally had another man bring him home about three o'clock Thursday morning. Both cars figuring in the smash were badly damaged. That no one was killed is considered a miracle.

Armed thugs should be killed on sight, thus riding the community of their menace, saving court costs and assuring a speedy justice.

If more of these armed thugs were killed there would not be so many holdups.

Notice

I wish to thank the voters of the Town of Frankfort for their past favors in electing me to the office of assessor. I have been and still am a candidate for this office on independent ticket No. 1 and I have never thought of withdrawing my name from that ticket. If I have fulfilled my duty to the voters satisfaction as assessor in the past, I would appreciate their support at the town election on April 6.

Sanitarium Tax Important Issue

At the town election April 6th the voters will be asked to vote on a special tax for the Will County Tuberculosis Sanitarium. This slight increase in taxes should not be allowed to defeat the proposition, for if it does it will mean the crippling and perhaps closing of one of the most needed institutions in the county.

Masquerade At Mokena March 31

Don't forget the masquerade to be held by the Young People's Orchestra of Mokena at the St. Mary hall in Mokena next Wednesday evening March 31st. A good time assured for all.

BASKETBALL TOURNAMENT OPENS MARCH 29TH

Featuring the greatest array of basketball teams and talent ever assembled at the local gym—sixteen crack teams from every direction in a thirty mile radius—the Tinley Park Basketball Tournament will get under way Monday evening at 7:30 p. m. and continue each week evening (except Saturday) terminating Sunday afternoon when the southwest area champion will be crowned. Entries have been received from as far south as Manteno, Ill., as far north as Evanston; east from Dyer, Ind., and west from the hot bed of champions, Joliet. Many of the teams boast former university, college and high school stars.

Beautiful large gold, silver and bronze trophies will be presented to first, second and third teams respectively with individual awards given each player.

Frank Froeschauer, former Illini ace, will officiate.

Following is a list of entrants and opening round pairings:

MONDAY EVENING, MARCH 29

Game 1—7:30 p. m.

HOMEWOOD A. C. vs. HARVEY J. C.

Homewood has selected an all-star team from their local league with such stars as Auguston, former Northwestern University player; Mangano and Hagen. To cope with this potent outfit the Harvey J. C.'s have an assembly of last years Junior College champs bolstered with Morris and Reid from Thornton High's state champs.

Game 2—8:30 p. m. GLEN EAGLES (Lemont) vs. THE FALUWALS.

The Glen Eagle quintet is composed of the best Lemont has to offer which makes them a strong contender. The Faluwalas are a group of former Crane and Lane Tech athletes featuring in their lineup one of Tinley's favorite sons—none other than Paul Greco. Here's a chance to see a thrilling game.

Game 3—9:30 p. m. SALEM LUTHERAN vs. DYER, IND.

Just recently this famous aggregation of Schuld boys from Blue Island was crowned south division champs of the Walther League, one of this section's strongest conferences. This rangy outfit of former Blue Island high stars has been bowling over opponents all season. But a small and speedy Dyer quintet promises to give the Salems a battle and treat our local fans to a display of that famous Hoosier style of basketball.

TUESDAY EVENING MARCH 30

Game 4—7:30 p. m.

MANTENO vs. MOKENA

Manteno boasts a season record marred only by two defeats. This team from down south, count among their victims, the strong Chicago Heights Beavers and are promising to show us up-staters how real basketball is played. Mokena will hold the fort against this quintet and have bolstered their lineup with several new players. Let's see which team is right.

Game 5—8:30 p. m. PEOTONE vs. BELGIAN-AMERICANS.

Peotone is one of the two teams that scored a victory over Manteno. These husky lads will be a problem for the north siders from the other end of the circle. The Belgian-Americans have the pick of one of Chicago's largest clubs. This game promises to be fast and furious.

Game 6—9:30 p. m. TINLEY-ORLAND vs. BUDA CO.

The Tinley Park and Orland Park teams have joined forces which gives this outfit one of the rangiest teams in the tourney. The quintet will average about 6ft. 4 in., with plenty of speed when needed. Fans who recall the thrillers these two towns staged against one another during the season won't want to miss seeing the combined team in action. And Buda with an array of talent from all over the state promises to battle Tinley-Orland down to the wire. Let's have your support for this affair.

WEDNESDAY EVE. MARCH 31

Game 7—7:30 p. m. HAZELCREST vs. OTTAWA ST. M. E. (Joliet.)

Hazelcrest has been classed as strictly a tournament team, upsetting strong opponents in many tourneys this season. The M. E. church team hails from the city of champions and are regarded as one of Joliet's best. Look for anything to happen here.

Game 8—8:30 p. m.

BEECHER vs. MIDLOTHIAN

Beecher will present a much

Annual Floral Show Starts April 3

The Garden Club of Illinois will hold their annual flower show this year from April 3 to 11 at the Navy Pier in Chicago. As in previous years this show is very outstanding and beautiful and many look forward each year to attending it.

Mrs. Anton Benson of Mokena has advance tickets for it, which are much reduced, if purchased with in the next week. Anyone wanting to buy these tickets may call Mrs. Benson.

Non-High School Tax Increase Asked

A very important measure which deserves the unqualified support of the taxpayers is the raising of the non-high school tax from one half of one per cent to three fourths of one per cent. The tax levied for the non high school district is used to pay the tuition on all rural children as well as to pay the total high school cost in villages and cities that supply less than a four year course.

If this proposition is defeated it will mean that eighth grade graduates will not be accepted by four year high schools as they cannot be expected to indefinitely accept the eighth grade graduates unless the non-high school district pays its bills which it is claimed is hard to do as the present expenses are greater than the income from the present tax rate. Therefore, we recommend that you go to the school election the second Saturday in April and vote FOR this slight increase. Place an "X" in the top square of the special ballot and guarantee your children the continuance of the high school privileges they are now enjoying.

New Lenox To Vote On Hard Rds.

The voters of New Lenox township will be asked to vote on a special hard road proposition April 6. The proposition calls for a special tax levy for a period of five years for the purpose of constructing and maintaining gravel and macadam roads in the township.

stronger and more experienced team scrappy lads from our neighboring town promise to give these down staters a run for their money. Midlothian has started a victory march which they claim won't stop until they are crowned southwest champs. This game will conclude the first round elimination.

The GARDEN MURDER CASE

by S. S. VAN DINE

Copyright S. S. Van Dine WNU Service

"By George! I did hear something, now that you put it that way. I thought nothing of it at the time, since Woody was already dead. But just as I re-entered the stairway there was an explosion of some kind outside. I thought it was a car back-firing down in the street, and paid no attention to it."

"That's very interesting..." Vance's eyes drifted off into space. "I wonder..." But to continue your tale. You say you left the roof immediately and came downstairs. But there were at least ten minutes from the time you left the garden to the time I encountered you entering the apartment at the front door. How and where did you spend these ten intervening minutes?"

"I stayed on the landing of the stairs and smoked a couple of cigarettes. I was trying to pull myself together."

Heath stood up quickly, one hand in his outside coat pocket, and thrust out his jaw belligerently toward the agitated Kroon.

"What kind of cigarettes do you smoke?" he barked.

The man looked at the Sergeant in bewilderment, and then said: "I smoke gold-tipped Turkish cigarettes. What about it?"

Heath drew his hand from his pocket and looked at something which he held on his palm.

"All right," he muttered. Then he addressed Vance. "I got the stubs here. Picked 'em up on the landing when I came up from the dame's apartment."

"Well, well," sneered Kroon. "So the police actually found something!... What more do you want?" he demanded of Vance.

"Nothing for the moment, thank you," Vance returned with exaggerated courtesy. "You have done very well by yourself this afternoon, Mr. Kroon. We won't need you any more."

Kroon went to the door without a word.

"A good story," Markham commented dryly when Kroon had gone.

"Yes, yes. Good. But reluctant," Vance appeared disturbed.

"Do you believe it?"

"My dear Markham, I keep an open mind, neither believe nor disbelieve. Prayin' for facts. But no facts yet. Drama everywhere, but no substance."

There was a rustle in the passage-way, and Madge Weatherby came rushing into the study, with Heath following and protesting vigorously. It was obvious that Miss Weatherby had dashed up the stairs before anyone could interfere with her.

"What's the meaning of this?" she demanded imperiously. "You're letting Cecil Kroon go, after what I've told you? And I"—she indicated herself with a dramatic gesture—"I am being held here, a prisoner."

"The fact is, Miss Weatherby," said Vance, returning to his chair, "Mr. Kroon explained his brief absence this afternoon lucidly and with impelling logic. It seems that he was doing nothing more reprehensible than conferring with Miss Stella Fremont and a brace of attorneys."

"Ah!" The woman's eyes glared with venom.

"Quite so. He was breaking off with the lady for ever and ever."

"Is that the truth?" Miss Weatherby straightened in her chair.

"Yes, yes. No subterfuge. Kroon said you were jealous of Stella. Thought I'd relieve your mind."

"Why didn't he tell me, then?"

"There's always the possibility you didn't give him a chance."

The woman nodded vigorously.

"Yes, that's right. I wouldn't speak to him when he returned here this afternoon."

"Care to revamp your original theory?" asked Vance. "Or do you still think that Kroon is the culprit?"

"I—I really don't know now," the woman answered hesitantly. "When I last spoke to you I was terribly upset. . . . Maybe it was all my imagination."

Vance looked at the woman quizzically. "Since you're not so sure that Kroon did the deed, have you any other suggestions?"

There was a tense silence. Miss Weatherby's face seemed to contract. She drew in her lips.

"Yes!" she exploded, leaning toward Vance with a new enthusiasm. "It was Zalia Graem who killed Woody! She had the motive, as you call it. She's capable of such things, too. There was something between her and Woody. Then she chucked him over. He didn't have enough money to suit her. You saw the way they acted toward each other today."

"Have you any idea as to how she managed the crime?" Vance asked quietly.

"She was out of the drawing-room long enough, wasn't she?"

"Poignant question. Situation very mysterious," Vance rose slowly and bowed to the woman. "Thanks awfully—we're most grateful. And we shall not hold you prisoner any longer."

When she had gone Markham grinned sourly.

"The lady is well equipped with suspects. What do you make of this new accusation?"

Vance was frowning.

"Animosity shunted from Monsieur Kroon to La Graem. Yes. Queer situation. Logically speaking, this new accusation is more reasonable than her first. It has its points . . . If only I could get that disconnected buzzer out of my mind. It must fit somewhere . . . And that second shot—the one we all heard."

Vance again moved to the buzzer and inspected it with care. "No indications of a mechanism."

"It could have been removed before the repair man arrived," theorized Markham without enthusiasm.

"Yes, another possibility. I had thought of that too. But the opportunity was lacking. I came in here immediately after I had found the johnnie shot . . . He took the cigarette from his lips and straightened up. "By Jove! Someone might have slipped in here when we all dashed upstairs after the shot. Remote chance, though."

"Does the buzzer connect with any other room besides the den?" asked Markham.

Vance shook his head.

"No. That's the only connection."

"Didn't you say there was someone in the den at the time you heard this shot?"

Vance's gaze swept past Markham.

"Yes. Zalia Graem was there. Ostensibly telephoning."

"His voice, I thought, was a little bitter."

"We might get more information from the young woman herself," Markham put in sarcastically.

"Oh, yes. Quite. Obvious procedure. But I have a few queries to put to Garden first. Pavin' the way, as it were. I say, Sergeant, collect Floyd Garden and bring him here."

He Sank Limply Into a Chair.

Garden came into the room uneasily and looking slightly haggard.

"What a mess!" he sighed, sinking dismally into a chair. "Any light on the case?"

"A few fitful illuminations," Vance told him. "By the by, it seems that your guests walk in and out the front door without the formality of ringing or being announced."

"Oh, yes. But only when we're playing the races. Much more convenient. Saves annoyance and interruptions."

"And another thing: when Miss Graem was phoning in the den and you suggested that she tell the gentleman to call back later, did you actually know that it was a man she was talking to?"

Garden opened his eyes in mild surprise.

"Why, no. I was merely ragging her. Hadn't the faintest idea. But, if it makes any difference, I'm sure Sneed could give you the information, if Miss Graem won't. Sneed answered the phone, you know."

"It's of no importance," Vance brushed the matter aside. "It might interest you to know, however, that the buzzer in this room failed to function because someone had carefully disconnected the wires."

"The devil you say!"

"Oh, yes. Quite." Vance fixed Garden with a significant look.

"This buzzer, if I understand it correctly, is operated only from the den, and when we heard the shot, Miss Graem was in the den. Incidentally, the shot we all heard was not the shot that killed Swift. The fatal shot had been fired at least five minutes before that. Swift never even knew whether he had won or lost his bet."

Garden's gaze was focused on Vance with wide-eyed awe.

"God God, man!" He shook his head despondently. "This thing is getting hellish."

"By the by," said Vance, "Miss Weatherby tried to convince us that Miss Graem shot Swift."

"Has she any grounds for such an accusation?"

"Only that Miss Graem had a grudge of some kind against Swift and detested him thoroughly, and that, at the supposed time of his demise, Miss Graem was absent from the drawing-room. Doubts that she was in the den phoning all the time. Thinks she was up here, busily engaged in murder."

Garden drew rapidly on his pipe and seemed to be thinking.

"Do you yourself regard Miss Graem as capable of a cold-blooded, skillfully planned murder?"

Garden pursed his lips and frowned.

"Damn it, Vance! I can't answer that question. Frankly, I don't know who is and who isn't capable of murder. The younger set today are all bored to death, intolerant of every restraint, living beyond their means, digging up scandal, seeking sensations of every type. Zalia is little different from the rest, as far as I can see. She always seems to be stepping on the gas and exceeding the speed limits. How far she would actually go, I'm not prepared to say. Who is, for that matter? It may be merely a big circus parade with her, or it may be fundamental—a violent reaction from respectability."

"A vivid, though not a sweet, character sketch," murmured Vance. "One might say offhand that you are rather fond of her but don't approve."

Garden laughed awkwardly.

"I can't say that I dislike Zalia. Most men do like her—though I don't think any of them understand her. I know I don't. There's some impenetrable wall around her. She's either damned superficial or deep as hell—I can't make up my mind which. As to her status in this present situation . . . well, I don't know. It wouldn't surprise me in the least if Madge was right about her. Zalia has staggered me a couple of times—can't exactly explain it. You remember, when you asked me about father's revolver, I told you Zalia had discovered it in that desk and staged a scene with it in this very room. Well, Vance, my blood went cold at the time. There was something in the way she did it, and in the tone of her voice, that made me actually fear that she was fully capable of shooting up the party. I was relieved when she put the gun back and shut the drawer . . . All I can say," he added, "is that I don't wholly understand her."

"No. Of course not. No one can wholly understand another person. If anyone could he'd understand everything. Not a comfort! Thought . . . Thanks awfully for the recital of your fears and impressions. You'll look after matters downstairs for a while, won't you?"

Garden seemed to breathe more freely on being dismissed, and with a mumbled acquiescence, moved toward the door.

"Oh, by the by," Vance called after him. "One other little point I wish to ask you about."

Garden waited politely.

"Why," asked Vance, blowing a ribbon of smoke toward the ceiling, "didn't you place Swift's bet on Equanimity?"

CHAPTER IX

The man gave a start, and his jaw dropped. He barely rescued his pipe from falling to the floor.

"You didn't place it, don't you know," Vance went on dulcetly.

"Rather interesting" point, in view of the fact that your cousin was not destined to live long enough to collect the wager, even if Equanimity had won. And in the circumstances, had you placed it, you would now be saddled with a $10,000 debt—since Swift is no longer able to settle."

"God Almighty, stop it, Vance!"

Garden exploded. He sank limply into a chair. "How do you know I didn't place Woodie's bet?"

Vance regarded the man with searching eyes.

"No bookie would take a bet of that size five minutes before post time. He couldn't absorb it."

"But Hannix—"

"Don't make a Wall-Street financier of Hannix for my benefit," Vance admonished quietly. "And another thing: I happened to be sitting in a strategic position near your table when you pretended to place Swift's bet. You very deftly pulled the cord taut over the plunger of the telephone when you picked up the receiver. You were talking in to a dead phone."

Garden capitulated.

"All right, Vance," he said. "I didn't place the bet. But if you think, for one moment, that I had any suspicion that Woody was going to be shot his afternoon, you're wrong."

"My dear fellow!" Vance sighed with annoyance. "I'm not thinkin'. Higher intelligence not at work at the moment. Mind a blank. Only tryin' to add up a few figures. Ten thousand dollars is a big item. It changes our total—eh, what? . . . But you haven't told me why you didn't place the bet."

Garden rose angrily.

"I didn't want him to lose the money," he asserted aggressively. "I knew what it would mean to him."

"Yes, yes. The Good Samaritan. Very touchin'. But suppose Equanimity had won, and your cousin had survived—what about the payoff?"

Lesson for March 28

JOHN'S RECOLLECTION OF THE RISEN LORD.

LESSON TEXT—John 20:19-29: 21:20-24. GOLDEN TEXT—And when I saw him, I fell at his feet as dead. And he laid his right hand upon me, saying unto me, Fear not; I am the first and the last: I am he that liveth, and was dead; and behold, I am alive for evermore, Amen; and have the keys of hell and of death. Rev. 1:17,18. PRIMARY TOPIC—Our Living Lord. JUNIOR TOPIC—Eating Breakfast With Jesus. INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Who Saw Jesus After His Resurrection? YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Christ's Resurrection a Glorious Fact.

"The best authenticated fact in all history"—that is what competent historians have called the resurrection of Christ. One of America's greatest legal authorities used it as an illustration of how properly to prove a fact in court. If anyone comes to this lesson with doubts about the bodily resurrection of our Lord, let him give himself to a study of the evidence. He will find it overwhelmingly satisfying and complete.

That is as it should be, for the resurrection is vital to the completeness of man's redemption. Had Jesus died and remained in the grave, his claims would have been nullified; we should indeed have been "of all men most miserable" (I Cor. 15:19). But Paul goes on in triumphant faith, "Now is Christ risen from the dead." We have a resurrection faith, a living Saviour.

Our lesson brings before us our Lord in his post-resurrection appearance to his disciples, and a subsequent conversation with Peter. These verses fittingly tie up the resurrection of Christ with the life and service of his followers. Those who serve the risen Christ have an inward peace and an outward authority and power. Their convictions are based on the best of evidence and carry them forward to a life of personal responsibility and service.

I. Peace (20:19-21).

Peace of Soul is absolutely essential to useful and satisfied living. Only as we are "steadfast, immovable," can we be "abounding in the work of the Lord" (I Cor. 15:58). Steady at the center, active at the circumference.

II. Authority (vv. 21-23)

Commissioned and sent by the Son of God, clothed with Holy Spirit power, the Church of God has his authority. While some have read too much into verse 23, others have read out of it the real authority that God has given.

III. Conviction (vv. 24-29)

Thomas made the serious error of being absent from the gathering of the disciples when the Lord Jesus stood in their midst. Let those who commonly absent themselves from the place and hour of worship take heed lest they miss a blessing, and coming later add nothing to the spiritual life of the church, but rather become troublers and doubters.

But God graciously turns the doubt of Thomas into a means of blessing to all of us who since then have read of his experience. Thomas was an honest doubter. God is always ready to meet such with satisfactory proof. The trouble is that there are so many in the world who use professed doubts to cover a life of sin.

Doubt may come to any man. In itself it is no sin. But to cherish it and hold to it in unbelief—that is a different matter. One wise spiritual leader rightly counseled his people, "Believe your beliefs and doubt your doubts. Never make the mistake of doubting your beliefs or believing your doubts."

When Thomas saw the Lord, doubt rapidly changed to strong personal conviction and abandonment of himself to his Lord and Saviour.

IV. Responsibility (21:20-24)

This incident took place at a later appearance of Jesus to a smaller group of the disciples. The irrepressible Peter has, as usual, a question to ask, "What shall this man do?" It is a right thing to be concerned about the welfare of others, to see to it that they live right and do right. But there is in our relationship to God a primary personal responsibility, our own lives.

The writer of the Song of Solomon (1:6) spoke a profound and deep-cutting word when he said, "They made me keeper of the vineyards; but my own vineyard have I not kept." Perhaps Jesus is saying to me, or to you, the solemn words that he spoke to Peter, "What is that to thee? follow thou me."

Personal responsibility should be one of the most resultful factors in the making of manhood, as in the finding of salvation.

Household Questions

A little salt added to an egg before beating makes it light and easier to beat.

Cretonne slip covers will retain their color better if washed in bran water.

Sweet Prunes—A very delicious as well as unusual way of serving prunes for breakfast is to soak them in fruit juices. Whenever a jar of fruit is opened save the juices and put a few prunes in the jar. When they have become swollen they are ready to be eaten.

Keep the top on the milk bottle so the milk does not absorb ice box or refrigerator odors from other foods.

To make perfect muffins combine all dry ingredients, then add liquids quickly, stirring but not beating. Do not stir after ingredients are moistened. Fill muffin pans two-thirds full and if mixture looks lumpy it will smooth out during baking.

Agateware is easily chipped, so don't scrape out food that becomes stuck in it.

Rugs should be turned around every six months. Frequent turning causes them to wear evenly.

Coddled Apples—Two cups boiling water, one or two cups sugar, eight apples. Make a syrup of sugar and water, boiling five minutes. Core and pare apples; cook slowly in the syrup; cover closely and watch carefully. When tender, lift out the apples, add a little lemon juice to syrup and pour over apples. The cavities in the apples may be filled with jelly or raisins.

Clear boiling water will remove tea stains from table linen.

Home Made Crackers—Sift together one-fourth a teaspoonful of salt and one cup of pastry flour. With a knife or tips of the fingers work to a dough with water, sweet milk, or thin cream (the last is preferable). Knead slightly—just enough to get into shape—then roll into a very thin sheet, stamp out with cutters, or cut into rectangular pieces with a sharp knife, prick with a fork, and bake a delicate brown.

Why Laxatives Fail In Stubborn Constipation

Twelve to 24 hours is too long to wait when relief from clogged bowels and constipation is needed, for then enormous quantities of bacteria accumulate, causing GAS, indigestion and many restless, sleepless nights.

If you want REAL, QUICK RELIEF, take a liquid compound such as Adlerika. Adlerika contains SEVEN cathartic and carminative ingredients that act on the stomach and BOTH bowels. Most "overnight" laxatives contain one ingredient that acts on the lower bowel only.

Adlerika's DOUBLE ACTION gives your system a thorough cleansing, bringing out old poisonous waste matter that may have caused GAS pains, sour stomach, headaches and sleepless nights for months.

Adlerika relieves stomach GAS at once and usually removes bowel congestion in less than two hours. No waiting for overnight results. This famous treatment has been recommended by many doctors and druggists for 35 years. Take Adlerika one-half hour before breakfast or one hour before bedtime and in a short while you will feel marvelously refreshed. At all Leading Druggists.

HEAVY HEARTS

When hearts are heavy due to something said,
Which makes you feel your path is hard to tread,
And when it comes from one you love so true,
It's hard to think and know just what to do;

First love, then sorrow springs forth from your heart,
Your God and you seem miles and miles apart,
Just stop and dwell within his sacred love,
And quickly place a prayer to him above,

Or when your load is heavy due to daily trials,
And paths you're forced to travel seem endless miles,
Just put your trust in God with all your might,
And every single problem will come out right,

God in his tender mercy, love and power,
Will hear and answer in your darkest hour,
Instill within each heart such peace and rest,
That only he alone can give to those oppressed.

AUXILIARY PRESENTS BIRCHWOOD PLAQUE TO POST.

Birchwood plaques, commemorating the American Legion's service to the cause of conservation are being presented to Legion Posts throughout the country this month by their Units of the American Legion Auxiliary, according to Mrs. Ruth Freitag, President of the local Auxiliary Unit. One of the plaques was presented to Commander Ward of Tinley Park Post at the March 19 auxiliary meeting by Mrs. Freitag.

The plaques are made of yellow birch, which is typical of the wood in the Argonne Memorial Forest in Wisconsin, the first memorial forest sponsored by the Auxiliary. They were constructed at the Mountain Craft Camp in the forest area by a specially selected group of Civilian Conservation Corps boys and made available to the Auxiliary by the United States Forest Service.

The plaques bear the words: "Conservation of Natural Resources is National Defense", and the conservation resolution passed at the national convention of the Auxiliary in Cleveland last September, which reads:

"Always pledged to maintain the strength and promote the general welfare of our republic and recognizing that the material power and social well-being of the American people were from the beginning based on unsurpassed natural resources, the depletion of which has confronted our country with a condition demanding nation-wide governmental action to restore and preserve those shaken foundations of our original greatness; and further recognizing that the processes necessary to the restoration of those natural resources, and their perpetuation by wiser use in the future, will not only re-strengthen the nation but also create a vast and ever available reservoir of useful employment, which will contribute permanently to the social security and economic independence of the American people, the American Legion Auxiliary in convention assembled, pledges its active support to the Federal and State governments in their constructive effort to restore and protect forests with all their multitude of attendant benefits on such lands as are primarily suited therefore, to reduce our loss of agricultural soil caused by erosion, to control destructive floods; and to conserve our resources of water in accordance with their most beneficial uses."

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES

"Matter" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ. Scientist, on Sunday, March 21.

The Golden Text was, "I have declared, and have saved, and I have shewed, when there was no strange god among you; therefore ye are my witnesses, saith the Lord, that I am God" (Isaiah 43:12).

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible: And it came to pass, when Pharaoh had let the people go, that God led them not through the way of the land of the Philistines, although that was near: "And the Lord went before them by day in a pillar of a cloud, to lead them the way; and by night in a pillar of fire, to give them light; to go by day and night: He took not away the pillar of the cloud by day, nor the pillar of fire by night, from before the people" (Exodus 13:17, 21, 22).

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "As the children of Israel were guided triumphantly through the Red Sea, the dark ebbling and flowing tides of human fear,—as they were led through the wilderness, walking wearily through the great desert of human hopes, and anticipating the promised joy,—so shall the spiritual idea guide all right desires in their passage from sense to Soul, from a material sense of existence to the spiritual, up to the glory prepared for them who love God" (p. 566:1-9).

Surely every Christian believing this Gospel should on Easter Sunday be at church to worship and adore this risen, living Christ Jesus. We welcome you to attend our services listed above.

The Lutheran Hour

"Great sections of American Protestants are honeycombed with the denial of the foundational doctrine of Christianity the deity of Jesus Christ," Dr. Walter A. Maier declared yesterday in his weekly Lutheran Hour broadcast over a coast-to-coast network. "Convince the clergymen of any of our large cities and you will find an outstanding proportion that denies this truth or refuses to commit themselves to the Biblical doctrine of Christ's divinity and his atoning death."

"If this denial increases in the same proportion that has marked its growth since the beginning of the century, it will not be long before only a numerically insignificant minority within some of our larger denominations will hold to these pillars of truth or Christian faith. Before it is too late and liberalism seizes control of these American pulpits, there should be a determined counter movement on the part of our conservative Christian groups instead of efforts to unite in one church body."

"Scriptural minded Christians should consider ways and means of breaking away from denominational connections where the deity of Christ and his sacrificial redemption are discarded or denied. History shows that the longer Orthodox Christians remain affiliated with church-denying groups, the weaker and less effective their protest becomes. The time has come for new alignment of Christian forces in America."

Ford Dealers Used Car Sales Set New Record

The Ford Dealer's state-wide sale of used cars launched March 1, with price reductions on all makes and models in their 'trade-in' stocks led to record-breaking sales. W. K. Edmunds, manager of the Chicago Ford branch declared today.

"More than 3,000 used cars and trucks, it is estimated, were sold thru out the branch territory during the first 10 days of the sale. This represented close to $700,000 worth of automobiles—a new high mark for Ford dealer used car sales in a similar period," Mr. Edmund said.

"Due to the large increase in the sale of new 1937 Ford V8s, many of the best used cars have come to the Ford dealer. He must dispose of them now, regardless of cost, to clear the decks for Spring new car business."

The Ford dealers' sale will continue thru out March.

Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted
By WILLIAM BRUCKART
NATIONAL PRESS BLDG. WASHINGTON, D. C.

Washington.—Developments that have taken place and are taking place in the fight precipitated by President Roosevelt's plan to reform the Supreme court of the United States show some phases not hitherto evident in political fights. One of these, I believe, portends important changes in the political alignment in this country. I have reported to you in these columns many times evidences of a growing trend toward a new political alignment and I can say now that nothing which has taken place since Mr. Roosevelt took his New Deal into the White House has given such impetus to this coming realignment as his proposal that congress pass a law giving him authority to name six more justices for the highest court.

The information coming into Washington these days shows very plainly that the Roosevelt court packing proposal is calling forth opposition from both of the major political parties. In other words, the opposition to the President's move is probably nonpartisan to a greater extent than any issue before the American people in the last 50 years. It will be remembered that the late President Wilson's proposal that the United States enter the League of Nations falls within that period of time and while there was both Democratic and Republican opposition to Mr. Wilson's program, it can not be said to have extended among the rank and file of the Democratic party, then in power, to the extent that Mr. Roosevelt's court packing project has permeated the lists of Democratic voters.

I have endeavored to gain the views of many individuals respecting the prospects of a new political alignment but few of the men whose judgment is best politically are willing to make a guess. A considerable number of them say frankly that they are unable to guess. On the other hand, however, there was general agreement that Mr. Roosevelt, by suddenly tossing his court program into the lap of congress, has given momentum to a movement that for some months appears to have been simply marking time.

There are certain facts on this phase of the court battle that appear obvious. They are influential and important as well.

Take for example the fact that Mr. Roosevelt does not have the backing of the so-called solid South for his proposition. Now, the Democratic party for three-quarters of a century has maintained the South as a stronghold of its party. Indeed, in every presidential and congressional election, Republican politicians began calculating what the Democratic strength could be at the maximum by conceding 13 states to the Democrats. How different is the situation, now.

One can go through the lists of representatives in congress from the South and find them rather evenly divided. One will find among Mr. Roosevelt's opponents in this battle numerous senators and representatives who have supported him on every other item of legislation that he has recommended to congress. Now, however, the story is different.

Another interesting phase of the legislative situation is that the bulk of the true and constant liberals in the senate and the house have taken a stand against the proposition of increasing the Supreme court from nine to fifteen members.

These two points do not represent all of the factors opposing the President's plan by any means, but I think it can be definitely said that if Mr. Roosevelt is defeated in his demand at this time, the two factors that I have named will have been the deciding influences.

Having influences like those just mentioned expanding in their scope, portends, as I suggested above, a considerable shake-up in party affiliation of a lasting kind. I do not mean to say that all of the liberals who are opposing the plan and all of the Democrats who are opposing the court-packing will refrain from supporting Mr. Roosevelt on other issues in the future. I do mean to emphasize, however, that some of them will not return to the ranks of Roosevelt stalwarts.

Thus it becomes rather obvious, I think, that the conservative ranks in congress will be increased to the extent that some of the defections, caused by Mr. Roosevelt's court proposal, result in permanent adherence to other philosophies.

So it seems to me that the future holds the probability of a sharp line of demarcation between radicals and conservatives. How they will be identified and what labels they may wear is immaterial. We are due to have a conservative party and a radical party in this country and its shape and character is being molded under the driving fire of the controversy precipitated by Mr.

Roosevelt's demands for six more Supreme court justices.

In a previous article I discussed the bitterness that has permeated the Supreme court controversy. This bitterness is growing and no one can tell how terrific it is going to be. Yet, while the political leaders make charges and countercharges, it seems to me to be almost pathetic that the nine judges of the Supreme court must sit quietly by and say nothing. They can not defend themselves against the criticisms leveled at them by President Roosevelt and his associates.

I have searched the records as far as I have been able and I have yet to find where any justice of the Supreme court of the United States ever has expressed himself publicly on any occasion when the court was assailed. It is a rule that is strictly adhered to by the nine justices whom Mr. Roosevelt has described as "the nine old men." Therefore, we see them as the center of one of the greatest political battles in history, wholly unwilling to besmirch their dignity or their records by answering back.

The recent "fireside chat" by Mr. Roosevelt was replete with innuendoes and inferences that the members of the court are quite incapable of doing their job; that they are living in an age that is dead and, consequently, unable to see things as the rest of the country sees them today. Mr. Roosevelt's speech at the victory dinner of the Democrats was purely politics and his fireside chat in explanation of his court program was 90 per cent politics. But the Supreme court is not in politics. It strikes me as being almost a tragedy that these "nine old men" can not defend their honor and their record after a lifetime of service to the American people.

I do not take much stock in the many tirades that have filled the air and columns upon columns of newspaper space that the present justices are incapable of doing their job. There is so much untruth, so many unwarranted conclusions in those tirades that it amounts to a gigantic campaign that will mislead the people of the nation. Assuming that some of the justices are too old to do their job and assuming further that some of them may be too conservative to deal with present day problems, it yet seems to me to be an indisputable fact that there is nothing in life that can take the place of experience and the lessons thus learned.

While Mr. Roosevelt was taking a vacation in the warm sunshine of Georgia, the case in behalf of the court packing proposition was ably presented to the senate committee on the judiciary. His spokesmen were Attorney General Cummings and Assistant Attorney General Robert Jackson. They did their job well. They met some of the most vicious questions from committee members that I have ever heard and they met them with a smile. True, opponents of the program among those senators were not satisfied at all with the explanations advanced by the President's spokesmen. That fact, however, does not take away from the two witnesses the credit that is due them.

And thus for the first time we have what must be regarded as official arguments. I mean these arguments are to be distinguished from fireside chats and political speeches concerning the merits of the President's plan. Likewise, for the first time we have a frank admission that Mr. Roosevelt's purpose in asking congress to give him authority for appointing six additional judges is to give him men on that court who will see present day problems as the President sees them.

In view of Mr. Jackson's statements to the committee, we can look back upon some of the speeches made by New Deal spokesmen some months ago and can realize from them and present developments that Mr. Roosevelt had the general purpose of packing the court in mind for some months. This circumstance seems to explain also why the President and his advisors refused to accept the recommendation of Prof. Raymond Moley in 1934. At that time, Professor Moley, a member, if not the number one man, of the Brain Trust, urgently pressed for the New Dealers to go to the country with two constitutional amendments. He wanted the people of the country to understand that these amendments would permit enactment of certain types of laws. He thought that the congressional elections of 1934 was the time to present the questions to the voters. It must be said that Professor Moley's proposition was one of the fairest and soundest to be made. It is a method prescribed by the Constitution itself.

The Spirit of Easter

Posed by Loretta Young.

In the end of the Sabbath, as it began to dawn toward the first day of the week, came Mary Magdalene and the other Mary to see the sepulchre.

And behold, there was a great earthquake; for the angel of the Lord descended from Heaven and came and rolled back the stone from the door and sat upon it.

His countenance was like lightning and his raiment white as snow. And for fear of him the keepers did shake and became as dead men.

And the angel answered and said unto the women: "Fear ye not; for I know ye seek Jesus, which was crucified."

"He is not here; for He is risen, as He said. Come, see the place where the Lord lay."—St. Matthew 28:1-6.

Celery Olives Radish roses

Hind quarter of spring lamb
Potato balls
Broccoli with wine, butter sauce
Fresh lima beans, hot rolls

Short-Lived Governments

France has had 100 governments—premiers and their cabinets—or an average of one every eight months since becoming a republic for the third time in 1871. Not one has served a full term of four years because each has been forced to resign the first time that one of its bills was voted down by the National Assembly, an act which is indicative of a lack of confidence in the cabinet. —Collier's Weekly.

SAMMY JAY SPREADS A FALSE REPORT

SOME people like to spread bad news. They would rather spread bad news than good news. It's queer, but it's so. Sammy Jay is that kind. He never seems so happy as when he is flying about through the Green Forest telling some dreadful news to everybody he meets. And this isn't the worst of it. He doesn't always tell the truth! He sometimes makes things out a great deal worse than they really are so as to make his story more exciting. And so it often happens that Sammy spreads false reports. You know false reports are stories that are not true or only partly true.

Now, Sammy Jay had happened along just in time to see Farmer Brown's boy pick up poor Mrs. Grouse after he had broken the hard, icy crust that had made her a prisoner underneath. She had been so weak and worn out that she could only flutter feebly when he had set her free, and so he had picked her up and started for home with her. Sammy Jay had seen this. His eyes had popped out with excitement. Here was great news. He couldn't sit still a minute. And what a splendid chance to say something bad about Farmer Brown's boy! Sammy never misses a chance to make trouble for Farmer Brown's boy.

So off he started as fast as he could go. The first one he met was Chatterer the Red Squirrel.

"Great news! Great news!" screamed Sammy.

"What is it?" asked Chatterer.

"Farmer Brown's boy has killed poor Mrs. Grouse and taken her home for his dinner!" cried Sammy.

"I don't believe it," replied Chatterer, who right that minute was eating nuts that he knew Farmer Brown's boy had left for him.

"You don't have to, but that doesn't make it that it isn't so. I saw him do it," retorted Sammy, and started on.

Right away Chatterer lost his appetite. He didn't know whether to believe it or not. He felt dreadfully sorry for Mrs. Grouse and then, too, he didn't like to think that Farmer Brown's boy had been very good to him, and though he had once hated him, he rather liked him now that he had come to know him, though Chatterer wouldn't have admitted this to anybody for the world. "Oh, my no! I don't believe it," he muttered over and over to himself. "I don't believe it." But just the same he lost his appetite.

Presently Sammy Jay saw Reddy Fox. "Great News! Great news!" shrieked Sammy.

"What is it?" demanded Reddy.

"Farmer Brown's boy has killed poor Mrs. Grouse and taken her home for his dinner," replied Sammy.

"How do you know?" demanded Reddy suspiciously.

"I saw him do it," replied Sammy.

"I hate Farmer Brown's boy!" growled Reddy Fox. "Mrs. Grouse belonged to me. I meant to have her for my dinner some day."

"Why didn't you catch her then?" asked Sammy Jay slyly.

"I would have, some day," snapped Reddy.

"The way you have Peter Rabbit!" laughed Sammy.

Reddy couldn't say a word, for you know he had tried and tried to catch Peter Rabbit and never could. He just glared up at Sammy, who just laughed and then flew off to spread the dreadful news. All the rest of the day he told the same story until all the little people who were out that cold winter day in the Green Forest and on the Green Meadows, green no longer because they were covered with snow, had heard that poor Mrs. Grouse had been killed by Farmer Brown's boy. And some it made very, very sad. And some, like Reddy and Granny Fox and Old Man Coyote, it made angry, for each of them had meant some day to have Mrs. Grouse for dinner themselves. And all the time Mrs. Grouse wasn't dead at all, as you and I know.

First Aid to the Ailing House

RENOVATING A BATHROOM

BATHROOMS have been so greatly improved within the last few years that one of old style makes a whole house seem old-fashioned. The points that make a bathroom out-of-date are a bathtub on legs, a high-tank toilet, a wash-basin with a marble top or of old-fashioned design, plaster walls and a wood floor. The door of a bathroom of that kind is usually kept closed at all times, whereas a room of modern design is something to be proud of.

There is no great effort or expense in renovating an old bathroom and in giving it all of the beauty of modern design. A new toilet is built-in in a corner, which completely obviates the collecting of dust beneath and behind it. A built-in tub also permits the fitting of a wall shower, with the use of a curtain to confine the spray. A separate shower stall is preferred to a wall shower, and can often be built at the end of a tub, which thus has only one side open.

Of the new fixtures, the tub is the most expensive. When costs must be kept down, an old style tub can be built-in by removing the legs, wedging it in a corner, and surrounding it by a framework finished with tiles or other waterproof covering. When this is done, the wall surface must come well over the rounded rim of the tub, so that water, running down the walls, will drain into the tub rather than behind the rim.

The most usual finish for bathroom walls is a five-foot or six-foot wainscot of tiles, which are usually set on a concrete base laid on metal lath. Many substitutes for tiles are to be had. In making a selection, it must be borne in mind that the walls should be waterproof, easily cleanable, not affected by steam, and proof against scratching.

The walls above the tile wainscot and the ceiling should have a finish that will not be affected by steam. For this, the modern quick drying enamels are excellent.

For the floor, the choice is between tile, and linoleum, rubber or similar material. Linoleum is very usual because of its warmth and softness.

A sunny bathroom can well be finished in one of the cool colors—green or blue. For a north bathroom, the color should be warmer—rose, or a warm yellow, for example.

In the Log-Book

A ship's log-book is the ship's diary, notes a writer in London Answers Magazine. In it are entered the rate of progress according to the log, hence its name, and all other particulars of the ship's course. In it also are entered all details of misdemeanors committed on board, with the culprit's name and the punishment meted out. From this we get the expression, "to log a man," used in the sense of to fine him.

End of the Trawler Roche Castle

Under the steady pounding of the heavy waves of an angry sea the trawler Roche Castle is slowly being smashed to matchwood on the rocky Gower (Glamorgan) coast near Overton, Wales, where she went ashore.

LOTS WORSE OFF

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

SOME say, "Well, there are lots of others, too. Of others who are lots worse off than you."

I cannot comprehend their cheerful whine:

The grief of others is no balm for mine.

Another's grief adds something to my own:

I wish no other heart this hurt had known,

No other mind had suffered this distress;

Their loss makes mine the greater, not the less.

The beggar's rags make no man's coat of gold,

Or age's feebleness a man less old.

The deeper sorrow of the open ground

Is not a thing to hail with joyful sound.

Whatever I may lose, if less or more,

Another's loss adds nothing to my store.

So tell me not, whatever you may do,

"There are a lot a lot worse off than you."

The grief that gloats will find but small relief

By hiding it behind some greater grief.

However poor another beggar is, If I have more, then half of it is his.

However dark another mortal's mind,

Then I should share whatever hope I find.

Yes, say to me, "That is the thing to do,

For there are others lots worse off than you."

THE LANGUAGE OF YOUR HAND

FROM the preceding lessons we have learned that the first, or Finger of Jupiter, indicates the degree and kind of power and purposefulness of its possessor. We must look not only to the conformation of the finger but also to its position on the hand in order to arrive at accurate conclusions.

A forefinger which leans or crooks toward the finger next to it partakes of the qualities of that finger. The Finger of Jupiter which inclines toward it neighbor indicates that purpose is strongly controlled by reflective foresight. And the manner in which it inclines denotes the kind of foresight, whether studious, gloomy, optimistic or doubtful.

The Overcautious Finger of Jupiter.

Three outstanding characteristics mark this type of forefinger: (1) Shortness as compared with the length of the second finger; (2) prominence of the middle joint; (3) pronounced angularity of the inclination toward the second finger.

The nail joint may be either squared or tapered, with a flat though sometimes sharply ridged nail deeply set. In fingers falling within this classification, the entire length may have a stiff resistant feeling under backward pressure.

When you encounter a forefinger of this type, you will make no mistake in placing its owner as a man or woman whose initiative is often stifled by an aversion to "taking chances." Conservatism which becomes unnecessary weighing of pro's and con's is very likely to keep such folk from the enjoyment of life which should otherwise be theirs.

It's a Party Sure Enough!

AND the girl holding the curtains back, just looking on, might be joining the fun except for her misconception that "party" clothes are hard to sew. She made the neat sweet house model she's wearing with no trouble at all—but—

And Here's the Story.

"Marge, did you really make your pretty dress all yourself? It looks so elaborate; I'd be afraid to cut into chiffon like that for fear I'd ruin it."

"Be yourself, Rose. It doesn't take a bit more skill to make my dress than yours. The pattern explains everything. You can't go wrong. I get a double kick out of making a party frock—I feel important sewing it and elegant wearing it. I couldn't begin to have so many party clothes if I didn't belong to The-Sew-Your-Own!

Mother Made Daughter's Dress.

"Joanie, dear, aren't you beginning this party business pretty young?"

"No, Auntie Rose, of course not. I've another one just like it that Grandma made for me. It's red and it has blue bands around it. I'm going to wear it to school tomorrow."

"Well, I see where I've got to get some silks and crepe, pluck up my nerve, and have clothes like other people. I wanted to join the Jolly Twelve but I just felt I didn't have anything to wear. Now I've decided to join The Sewing Circle and make a real fashion debut, come Spring!"

The Patterns.

Pattern 1237 is for sizes 34 to 46. Size 36 requires 4½ yards of 35 inch material plus five-eighths of a yard contrasting.

Pattern 1241 is cut in sizes 14 to 20 (32 to 44 bust). Size 16 requires 4½ yards of 39 inch material, and 1½ yards of ribbon for the belt together with 3 yards of machine made trimming.

Pattern 1852 comes in sizes 2 to 8 years. Size 4 requires 2½ yards of 35 or 39 inch material. To trim as pictured 6 yards of ribbon are required.

TINLEY PARK

Mrs. Ernest Freberg fell down the stairs in her home Wednesday night and suffered injuries about her head and shoulders. She has been under the doctor's care.

The Tinley Park Vol. Fire Dept. members were hosts to the Community Firemen's Association of this district, Monday night in the Meister Brau Gardens. Following a business session, a program was presented.

The Tinley Park school band played a number of selections. There were other entertainment features on the program. Refreshments were served at the close of the meeting. There were 138 firemen members present and about fifty guests.
